"You will never know how much it has cost my generation to preserve your freedom.
I hope you make good use of it". –John Adams

"The price of freedom is eternal vigilance". –Thomas Jefferson

Dear Legislator:

This email is being sent to Republican legislators (as well as some Democrat legislators) in Pennsylvania, Georgia, Michigan, Wisconsin, Arizona, Nevada, and possibly other states.

I am a creative consultant, a political independent, and someone who cares deeply about our country. I believe that all partisanship needs to be completely put aside when it comes to the pursuit of truth and justice, because without these, we have nothing to continue to build our country upon. I am writing you this urgent letter for two main reasons:

1. To make you aware of a national prayer and fasting initiative that I created for the Presidential election, which now ties directly into the very position that you are in right now. Please visit the website <http://www.StrengthenTheNation.com> for more information on this.
2. To entreat you in the strongest terms possible to do all in your power and exert your rightful authority to immediately take back power and control of this election process, which has lost all rightful and spiritual grounding, has been subverted from the legislators and the American people, and is making a mockery of our system.

I created Strengthen the Nation in order to set higher standards for leadership in America, and to protect against the kinds of attacks on our ethical, spiritual, and constitutional foundations that have created the environment for that which we are currently witnessing. This situation involving the election is taking place within the larger context of a moral and spiritual crisis that has progressively plagued our nation over the last number of years.

Specifically, the election fraud-crisis that we are now in the throes of displays a level of malfeasance that this country has never witnessed before and threatens the entire standing of our Republic. It resembles events that happen in banana republics and not in settled democracies. It is massive, extremely dark, multi-layered, and multi-dimensional. Its engineering and coordination required hundreds of individuals and spanned multiple states, making it the greatest political scandal in American history. Its extensiveness involves state and federal unconstitutional acts, last minute importunate changes to voting laws, misconduct on the part of election officials, manipulated outcome of votes, innumerable procedural errors and illegalities, ethics violations, blatant law-breaking, complex cyber crime, domestic and foreign interference, voter disenfranchisement, and much more.

All of this alleged fraud and law-breaking was manifested in a wide range of spectacularly corrupt activity that was witnessed by over one thousand affiants, truth-tellers, and whistleblowers who have come forward. These witnesses have delivered devastating testimony of ballot harvesting, back-dating, curing votes, coaching of voters, dead people voting, out of state voting, incapacitated individuals voting, unethically using the homeless to vote, people voting multiple times, underage voting, felons voting, unregistered voters, fake ballots, altered and switched votes, deleted votes, unprotected chains of ballot custody, votes lost, votes sold, votes found in garbage cans and rivers, interference with and rank intimidation of Republican observers, suspicious use of USB thumb drives, loads of ballots driven across state lines, thousands of ballots stolen, stacks of ballots being fed into the machine multiple times, votes counted in secret, unverifiable votes, ballot dumps by the thousands, inaccurate and inflated voter rolls, weighted votes, statistical anomalies and near impossibilities, unsolicited ballots being indiscriminately sent to unverified addresses, and more—all of which categories favored Joe Biden and disfavored Donald Trump. Americans from generations of old have always disdained cheating. This is an injustice so severe that it unsettles the very concept of fairness across the entire spectrum of American life. Furthermore, the enormous amount of evidence that will come to light through the vigorous, functional, and honest investigations and discovery that this crisis demands and deserves will be a chilling reminder of why we are a nation of law and order.

There is no possible standard of enlightened, intelligent justice in the history of America that would allow any of these inane activities in this patent attempt to steal an election to be peddled upon the American people. None of this would have had the ability to stand in the light of day. In fact, every action that has been taken in mostly democrat controlled precincts, both in leading up to the election and since, has been to all but guarantee that the election would indeed not be fair, accurate, and protected. In fact, it would be hard to imagine a more obvious scenario in which an election could be rigged. But this is happening now because certain operatives in the media, in the Democratic Party (not all Democrats), and others have engaged with impunity in a long train of abuses against our nation and lawful order. We are now at the turning point where, even for those who are ardently resisting the reality that substantial fraud existed, it has become intellectually and logistically more difficult for them to deny that fraud, than it is for them to acknowledge it.

I can definitively say from personal experience from having been involved in the 2000 Presidential recount in Broward county, Florida that if any one of these irregularities that have been described in this election were witnessed in the Florida recount, then each and every one of those problematic ballots would have been promptly thrown out. The Florida recount, though imperfect, was nevertheless strict, well-organized, well-supervised, and transparent. The process involved one observer from both parties (and a supervisor) who had direct view of the ballots, as they were physically standing over the shoulders of those who were slowly and deliberately counting. There was full cooperation between those counting the votes and the observers/challengers. The idea that an observer from either party could have been shut out from any portion of this process would have been a literal impossibility and would have set off a firestorm of scandal.

There has been virtually at every turn and every level an attempt to undermine and jettison every reasonable measure to ensure election integrity—most notably, the intentional failure to safeguard that every vote cast would be from a properly registered legal voter of that state, was easily capable of being verified and traced back to its original source after the fact, and was cast on time and according to all the laws and requirements that were carefully and constitutionally derived from the state legislature. In addition to this, the revelations about the inherent design of the Dominion voting system and its companion software to provide a backdoor to manipulate votes should compel every American to call for the most advanced investigations that our country is capable of.

The most disgraceful action surrounding this election was the exploitation of the pandemic for political purposes. In this, fear was incessantly inflicted upon the American people to discourage voting in person; this provided cover for setting up a mass mail-in balloting scheme that created chaos and overwhelmed the system. The rationale for mail-in balloting, when juxtaposed with the rationale for allowing protesting (while ignoring COVID protocols), not to mention the rioting and looting in the streets, demonstrated the usefulness of double standards. The same media outlets and Democratic figures who, only days before the protests started, demanded the strictest lockdown and distancing policies, were now welcoming and encouraging the protests for days and weeks on end. Additionally, it was testified that democrat agitators consistently used Covid restrictions as an excuse to bully, intimidate, and get republican poll watchers thrown out of their stations, while then simultaneously relaxing the restrictions when it benefited them to do so.

This whole election crisis is, in effect, ground zero for you as an individual state legislator, the entire Republican Party, and every earnest democrat leader as well. This is happening in real time on your watch, and neither you in your own work (and personal power), nor America can go forward unless this coup is stopped in its tracks, its perpetrators brought to complete justice, and the results of this election restored to their proper standing. This election, not only for its own sake, but for the sake of all future elections, must be taken back to the full trust of the American people. This action is vital for every citizen from every political and social background because if it does not happen now, there may not be an America worth having any election for.

In fact, the harm that we are going through in this attempted election steal is nothing more than the next step in the subversiveness and treachery that has been leveled at Donald Trump's presidency for four straight years—which included the relentless pursuit of the Russia collusion hoax and an entirely contrived impeachment. This harm to the country and to the American people was also manifest through the extreme media bias (including big tech) and the suppression of vital information that was used to control narratives, censor conservatives and others, and conspire against the president and the America First agenda. This was, in effect, its own form of collusion.

I say this to encourage you to be galvanized to the boldest, greatest action on behalf of the people of your state because in certain very real respects, the future of our nation passes through your hands at this very moment. Corporately, you as legislators have the most direct and complete authority to step in and save this election and moment in history. Leaving this to the caprice of the courts is to abdicate your power and relinquish it to the few who are appointed rather than the many who are elected.

Does any rational person really believe that if this election fraud is allowed to stand that the outcome could possibly end well for the country? Even now, tens of millions of angry and bewildered patriotic Americans are wondering how any of this election steal could possibly happen in the United States. The reality is that if this massive election fraud is allowed to stand, the stature of America will fall. Every American, both present and future, will suffer loss, and both parties will be greatly impugned—the Democrats (including the many good ones) for being the sponsors of the fraud, and the Republicans (especially those who are saying nothing) for the appearance of being part of a corrupt system. Therefore, what all of this comes down to for you and your colleagues are three simple realities that center on truth, justice, and courage, and which will determine everything:

1. Without truth there can be no justice.
2. There is a war against the truth, and therefore the truth will be resisted by those who stand to gain by that resistance, as well as the ignorant.
3. Courage is what takes truth into the light; cowardice and apathy are what allow evil to flourish.

It is not enough for a leader to know the truth, which in this case is becoming ever-horribly obvious. One must also have the courage and power to stand by that truth. And it is precisely at this point where we see so many leaders—in this very crisis—personally falter and fail the country because they are unaware of the well-rehearsed tactics and steps that are employed by those who: 1) commit fraud, 2) vehemently deny that fraud was committed, 3) intimidate and attack those who attempt to expose the fraud, 4) accuse others of the very thing that they did, and 5) when caught, simply move on to the next scheme. Furthermore, the coordinated attempt by the media to entirely censor evidence of fraud is a conspiring gaslighting technique designed to dull Americans into accepting that which is false.

The fact that we have seen a purposeful and persistent attempt by some Democrat operatives, the media, and certain compromised weak Republicans to entirely ignore and suppress the enormity of the ever-mounting, ever-flowing evidence of fraud involved in this election tells the enlightened person that the charge of election fraud is dead on. That we see a manic rush to coronate Joe Biden as President, while simultaneously seeing from the same forces an attack on those who simply want to get to the truth, reveals sheer madness, attempted deception, and desperation. Also, it should be instructive that these same individuals who, for nearly three years, tried desperately to convince the nation of the Russian collusion hoax—despite having zero evidence—are the same individuals who are now trying to convince the nation that no voter fraud took place in the past election—despite an abundance of evidence to the contrary.

When one considers the many well-studied indicators that demonstrate the all but impossible outcome of Joe Biden winning the election, the evidence of fraud that has been presented is even further supported. For just a few examples:

- no president has won both Florida and Ohio and lost the election—Trump won both.
- no incumbent president has received more votes in their second election than in their first and lost—Trump received 11 million more in 2020 than he did in 2016.
- no incumbent president has had more enthusiasm from his base during the campaign for his second term than his rival had in his base, and lost—the enthusiasm level of Trump’s base was unmatched, whereas Joe Biden had no discernible base or actual enthusiasm.
- no incumbent president has received more than 75% of his party’s primary vote and lost—Trump received 94%.

Additionally, there are other metrics across the spectrum that illustrate the virtual impossibility of a Joe Biden victory, such as consistency in down ballot votes wins, increase in minority votes, internal polling, exit polling, etc., all of which skew toward Trump. Any one of these quantitative events occurring would be remarkable, for all of them to have occurred simultaneously would be unbelievable. To quote Patrick Basham (founding Director of the Democracy Institute): “If we are to accept that Biden won against the trend of all of these non-polling metrics, not only does it mean that each one of these metrics was inaccurate for the first time ever, it means each of these metrics was wrong for the first time and at the same time all together”. Furthermore, the idea that Joe Biden received over 10 million more votes than Barack Obama did in 2008 would not have been considered even a plausible one by any serious expert.

The combination of laziness, suppression of truth, and corruption that underlies this undemocratic process is coercing the entire population to believe the exact opposite of what is true. The notion that no voter fraud exists is absurd on its face. I watched almost all of the nearly 30 hours of state hearings in Pennsylvania, Arizona, Michigan, and Georgia and I can truly say that it would be impossible for any open minded person to pretend that the evidence is anything other than overpowering, overwhelming, deeply real and painful in human terms, and astonishing. The scope of fraud and violations of law is exceeded only in its depth, and is devastating to the delusion that these did not occur. In these states alone (not to mention other potential states), the revelations of these hearings alone (which are only partial) beg the question, “where isn't there evidence of voter fraud and violations”, rather than the tired question of “where is the evidence of voter fraud and violations of law?”

In fact, the brazen unwillingness to encourage a rightful constitutional process to have its exact, complete, and thorough due process—no matter how long it takes or what is involved—is so entirely un-American, that no previous generation of Americans would have tolerated it in any capacity. In truth, this is so important to our democracy that whatever is necessary to make the election right is what needs to be done.

In any situation involving fraud, no one knows more about the chicane than those who committed it. The pretense of “no fraud” continues only as long as it is possible to get away with it. It is up to those who were victimized to uncover the fraud, make the charge, and see it through. And if those in a capacity to defend society do not follow through on their due diligence in real time, they will then forfeit not only their moral authority, but also their ability to speak to this in the future when it will be easier to do so because “lies have short legs”, and the truth that is even now abundantly coming to light will eventually be fully revealed.

At this point, the very individuals who are now vehemently denying that fraud exists will rightfully ask those who failed to act in real time:

1. “If fraud was suspected and/or brought to your attention, then why didn't you bother to fully investigate it when you had the power to?”
2. “If you did find fraud, why did you do nothing about it?”

In light of this, all legislators (regardless of their party) must realize that future generations of Americans will not judge them based on their political expediency or what they did under the pressure of the moment, but rather on whether or not they were on the right side of God, history, and truth. And, it is certain that history will prove out all that is malevolently being obscured now.

The idea of solving the election process in the future, while allowing this blatant crime to go unaddressed in the present, is catastrophically wrong on many levels. The best way to stop election fraud in the future is to stop it in the present while you have the constitutional authority to do so. For if it is not done now while you are still strong, how can it be rationally assumed that it will be done in the future when you may be further stripped of your constitutional powers?

More importantly, the idea that “overturning election results” is too great a challenge, as some have fearfully asserted, should be categorically rejected because the only overturning of a rightful election was that which occurred in the middle of the night on November 3rd when, along with many other illegal and unethical activities, votes were secretly counted in back rooms. The certification of this election is tantamount to the certification of fraud and serves as a reward to lawlessness. Because of this, it is critical to understand that Article II, section 1, clause 2 of the US Constitution gives the authority to the state legislature to have final say over the choice of their electors. This provision grants the ability to have oversight to the very kind of situation that we face in this election. Therefore, no state legislator should allow their state’s electoral votes to be cast in such highly compromised circumstances, which the Constitution protects against.

It is now clearly impossible for any lawmaker to remain neutral or passive in this matter because silence is, in effect, consent to the greatest election scheme our country has known. In short, it is the responsibility and obligation of the state legislature to step in and make sure that their state’s electoral votes are cast according to an ethical, rightful outcome of the election, and not a fraudulent one.

It is in the best interest of (and the duty of) every American to support whoever is the rightful president at any time in, at the very least, the promoting of the general welfare of our country—whether they voted for that individual or not. It is also in the enlightened self-interest of every American to demand that all fraud and law-breaking in the 2020 election be fully exposed, as this is the only way to create the opportunity for true prosperity for the next four years, and avert disaster.

Brave Americans who have defended our nation in every form of military theater, from the Revolutionary War until this very day, did not do so so weak politicians would surrender our country to a domestic attack against our free elections. The most critical thing for you to be aware of and act according to is the spiritual battle over the soul of America that is taking place, which exhibits the fundamental dynamic of good vs. evil. In this battle, there is a severe, unnatural pressure being exerted against every person who is standing for the truth. The usual tactics of attempting to “cancel” and intimidate witnesses, whistleblowers, politicians, lawyers (who are defending the President and the country), conservative media outlets, and truth-tellers is so intense right now, that if one is unaware of this then they will be caught off guard and uneffectually shrink back in fear.

A word about the negative reactions from some from reversing the projected results of the election: a real leader is driven by doing what is true, he does not weigh his options when it comes to right and wrong. And if one quivers at the short-term reactions from doing what is right, how much more should he quiver at the long-term consequences (both for himself and the country) of doing what is wrong as, in this case, the ripple effect of a potential fraudulent presidency would reverberate throughout the country for years to come.

Moreover, the very fact that the threat of civil unrest and mob activity on the part of the left even exists on any level at all is disgraceful, completely unacceptable, and must come to an immediate end in this country. The concept of meeting the demands of a mob has always been anathema to our American way of life. Any undue influence that this type of all too common menacing has on those who serve in public office must be strongly stood against so that they may serve in freedom rather than in fear. “For God has not given us the spirit of fear; but of power, and of love, and of a sound mind.” (2 Timothy 1:7)

It is God who has allowed you to be placed in your position of authority in order to serve the people and the nation to their highest end. Therefore, it is God who will also give you the strength and courage to do what is right by your office, the people of your state, and your country. If you do this, you will go down in history as one of the heroes in our time who stood against tyranny.

Thank you for your attention to this critical matter. I am available to help you immediately, formally, or informally in any capacity with the coaching and consulting work that I do. Please go to www.jayetzel.com for information on my work.

I want to make it clear that any Republican, Democrat, or Independent who truly wants to serve this nation has my complete support.
